GOUR Medical has signed exclusive and worldwide licensing agreements with several bio-pharmaceutical leaders in human health for the development and marketing of their products for veterinary use. The bio-pharmaceutical leaders include Actelion in Switzerland [SIX Swiss Exchange: ATLN], Medicom Healthcare in the United Kingdom, Solmic Research in Germany and the US-based world leader in animal health diagnostics— Idexx Laboratories, Inc. [NASDAQ: IDXX].

- A line of ophthalmological products, with planned market launch during the second half of 2017;
- Gour-153, a painkiller scheduled to be marketed in 2018;
- Gour-713 and Gour-419, two products currently under development for the treatment of anxiety and atopic dermatitis respectively.

A growing market

The pet health market, which is currently estimated at € 9.4 billion worldwide, is experiencing strong and consistent growth and is expected to reach more than € 13 billion by 2020 (CAGR +7%). This trend looks sustainable, as pets are increasingly well fed and cared for. Indeed, the life expectancy of dogs' and cats' continues to increase and aging animals are the most likely to contract diseases.

Product development and marketing

GOUR Medical intends to extend its comprehensive portfolio to prepare for the market launch of its first products and strengthen its team. GOUR Medical also intends to take advantage of the dynamism, strong demand and steep growth of its core target: mature pets' health. Drawing on its successful listing on the Marché Libre Euronext Paris, GOUR Medical hopes to attract new investors to support its ambitious development strategy and in due course to transfer its listed shares to Alternext Paris.
